Barnum & Balley's circus trains met with difficulty in getting to Pittsfield Tuesday from Worcester, and the Boston and Albany railroad was blamed for delays. The circus wagons were still being drawn to the grounds on Pomeroy avenue at noon, and the thousands of people who had been waiting around since 9 o'clock wondered whether there would be a parade. Mayor P. J. Moore, who signed the license for the circus yesterday morning, inserted the clause. "No parade, license revoked." So it was up rade, license revoked." So it was up to the circus to make good. The parade went through North street about 3.30 o'clock, but did not contain the usual pageant—only some of the wagons and horses and the elephants. The steam calliope was in the procession but was not played as Boller Inspect-or Richardson refused the circus the right to use this machine, as it carries no licensed engineer and the boil-er is not of standard make.

After having the case in their hands up to 12.48 Wednesday, the jury came in and reported through Foreman Jas. F. Brown of North Stonington that they had been unable to agree. To the inquiry of Judge Milton A. Shumway, the foreman replied that there seemed to be no possibilty of an agreement upon a verdict.

been to the office of Mr. Craney, but only to talk over the letters and she went alone. He briefly referred to other parts of the testimony and then asked the jury to retire and resume their deliberations.

Those on the jury were the following: Preston, Frank H. Palmer, George A. Pendleton; Colchester, William H. Biacker; Griswold, William J. Miner; Lebanon, Everett M. Terry, Fred O. Brown; North Stonington, James F. Brown; Franklin, James W. Huntington: Sprague, Louis St. Onge; Lisbon, Charles Budeit; Salem, John H. Purcell; Voluntown, Leonard B. Kinnie.

In the general expression of opinion among those at court on Tuesday after the jury had gone out, the majority seemed to think that the verdict would be for the plaintiff, but with a small amount of damages. When the jury failed to agree on Tuesday afternoon, attorneys and others who were not in the case expressed the belief that this foreshadowed a disagreement that could not be smoothed out.

After the discharge of the jury on Wednesday both Attorieys R. M. Douglass and J. T. Fanning, counsel for Mr. Craney, said the suit would be tried again.

Mr. Douglass asked the court what agreement was reported.

When the jurors took their places in court Wednesday morning, and had answered to their names, Judge Shumway said he regretted that the case might have to be tried again for reasons that must be obvious to the jury. The case has consumed eight days of court. He read the jury a case decided by the supreme court wherein the jurors are asked to consider well their tried again.

Mr. Douglass asked the court wha was to become of the exhibits and Judge Shumway said they might go back to the people who had them.
